WHY I TOOK IT
Liquidity grab short off the high timeframe. The 01:20 candle spiked to 4,030.30, took the liquidity resting above the highs, then closed straight back below the descending trendline off the 23:00 high. Shorted the retest at 4,022. 4,026 had been support through the 21:00–23:00 range before it broke.

WHAT I WAS LOOKING FOR
Rotation back down through the 4,014–4,016 base and out through the 23:30 low at 4,013.60.

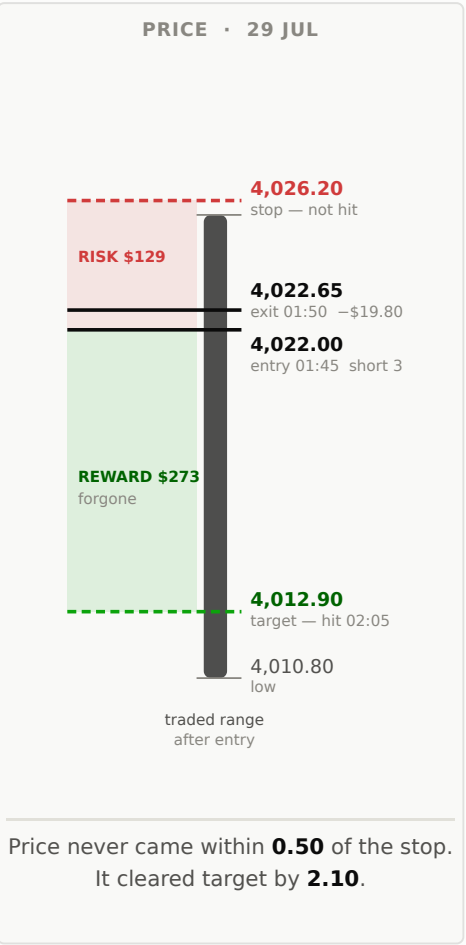

WHERE I'D MANAGE IT
Not written before entry.

STATE
Panicky. Funded account around break-even, small drawdown.

WHY I CLOSED
Coming up on the 1-hour close and the 5-minute wasn't driving into it. Protecting capital.

WHAT PLAYED OUT
The 02:00 candle opened 4,021.50 and closed 4,012.90 — the whole move arrived in one 5-minute bar, the bar after the exit. Price ran 2.10 points through target to 4,010.80. The stop was never threatened: it topped out 0.50 short of it.

Entry was taken off the 30-minute close. The exit was taken off the 5-minute into the 1-hour close — a different timeframe from the one the trade was built on.

THE SIX QUESTIONS

1 Punted out of boredom?	NO	2 Sized up after losers?	NO	3 Ditched a method on a small sample?	NO
4 Impressed by someone's weekly %?	NO	5 Exited on P&L rather than on the chart?	YES	6 Stop to break-even just to be safe?	NO

5 is the one. The stop was 4.20 points away and never got within 0.50 of being hit. The trade was closed on how it felt with the 1-hour close coming, not on anything the 30-minute had done.
